made in the population of the country in the past eight years and the fact that the women of the country voted at the November election the vote was far below expectations and must of necessity be disappointing to those who had anticipated tremendous gains.

The socialist made a large gain in New York but lost strength in Illinois. They gained in Massachusetts but they lost in Pennsylvania and the socialist vote also decreased in Ohio, California, Kansas, Missouri, Indiana and Oklahoma.

In view of the fact that Debs received almost as many votes in 1912 as he did in 1920, and that the enfranchisement of women practically doubled the electorate it doesn't appear that the votes of the women were thrown to that party. In fact women influence do not appear to have affected as many as they were expected to.

REGULATING THE RAILROADS.

In view of the importance to the country of the service which the interstate commerce commission is rendering under the law passed by the last session of congress, its annual report is bound to be followed with keen interest. That the commission recognizes the size of its task under the present legislation shown by its statement to the effect that it will be necessary to wait the outcome in practice before it can be definitely told what the effect is going to be, and as might be expected it calls attention to the difficulties which are being experienced because of the lack of cooperation on the part of the state utility commissions.

While state commissions have approved the rates put forth in only about half the states, there are two in which opposition has been manifested, where state have been taken to block the federal commission and to maintain that state control is a right which the federal commission cannot overstep.

This reveals a condition which isn't helping the railroad situation. It indicates a determination to deal with state roads in a way which will do them an injustice in comparison with those engaged in interstate commerce, or much the same sort of obstruction which existed prior to the passage of the new law and which it is expected that the Esch-Cummins law had overcome. Whether it has or not rests with the United States supreme court to determine.

This is one of the things that contribute to the uncertainty in the minds of the commission, and other trouble has been experienced in not being able to get the treasury department to make payments to the railroads of money due them at such times as it is believed it should be made. This is one of the points over which there is a difference of opinion and which the commission seeks to have cleared up by legislation that will make it clear.

THE WRONG WAY.

The situation which has developed in Mingo county, West Virginia, is one which every other state in the country has reason to regret and which in all probability is regretted in that state. It is apparently one of those contests over labor troubles which have been going on for some time past. It was believed that there was nothing but force for the settlement of such a dispute.

The trouble has developed to the point where sides are being taken by the public, and the result is that the peace is being threatened. It is necessary for the government to call upon the government for assistance from the federal troops. It is a case which has developed from the evident determination on both sides that it is going to be a fight to the finish. The result is that something like 50 have been killed and four times as many injured, where cold lead is taking the place of reason and where, even though great quantities of firearms have been collected from the people, there still remain enough to make conditions hazardous and life uncertain.

Each side of course makes charges against the other regarding the use of force, the bringing in of gunmen and the employment of means that create a state of terrorism throughout the country. The state of affairs there reveals conditions which ought not to exist in a civilized state. The coal fields in that part of the country have been the scenes of similar conflicts on previous occasions. It is a condition which is a little of trouble in that region but it is unfortunate that efforts are not made to bring about an adjustment of their disputes by arbitration. It ought to be possible for them as well as others to settle their troubles in accord with the law. The lawless state which is being displayed in Mingo county discloses a condition which both sides in the mining trouble ought to work to eliminate. However much both sides may feel justified in their stand there ought to be a middle ground on which they could get together for peaceful and sensible adjustment.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There are three when it seems that a word to the wise is not sufficient.

The man on the corner says: We are certain of some kind of weather whatever the forecasters claim.

If the Chicago case is any criterion somnambulism will be the defense of criminals in the future instead of insanity.

It might just as well be understood that the time has arrived when they must stop kicking the prohibition law around.

Now that the Congressional Record is going business again there is no telling what will happen in the print paper market.

Indications point plainly to the fact that it is going to be much more costly in the future to sell liquor than it has been in the past.

It looks very much as if Moscow would be willing to accept that mandate over Armenia which the league is anxious to get rid of.

By deciding not to send for Constantinople to return the Greek government is exposing her will return.

If the bolsheviks have got control of Armenia there's no need of a loan from this country. They'll be able to get along without money henceforth.

That suggestion that income tax blanks be so simplified that expert accountants are not required to work them out will appeal strongly to the taxpayers of the country.

New England is being drawn on heavily for Christmas trees but in view of the few cents the growers get for them it is to be hoped that they don't go the dump because of high prices to the consumer.

Some individuals consult their watches as solemnly as if they doubted the correctness of the sun.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Limestone has generally been regarded as inert mineral matter. In view of recent happenings, we may be forced to revise our definition of inorganic materials at least so far as limestone is concerned. The probe that is now being thrust into some New York centrals has shown limestone to be pretty lively, and the fact that it cut so humiliatingly that dignified old Mont Blanc—limestone—immediately lost its head and went flying down the valley toward Italy. After getting the first dispatches from New York, this respectable old peak felt that henceforth it must hide its head in shame. As a people we ought to have a good deal of respect for Mont Blanc for this act of decency. This whole probe thus far has shown how despotic men can be when they get into the seats of the mighty. They do exactly in the 20th century. America what the robber barons did in Europe in the 19th. A commercial reign of terror is just as disastrous in its results as a military, and if America would treat her robber barons today as Europe did here in the middle Ages the business world soon would see unpopularity.

Much is being said and written in these days about the compact that was signed in the Mayflower. This is very appropriate as the tercentenary of that document has just passed. Much emphasis has been rightly put on the fact that the principles set forth in that remarkable document were kept. One remarkable thing about the Mayflower compact was that it was a document of personal integrity. They respected a verbal promise as much as they did a written contract. That explains why they were trusted in their business transactions with those whom they might easily have defrauded had they been unscrupulous. It certainly shows that honesty is the best policy in the long run. As they gained the confidence of the natives, the latter were of inestimable value to them in teaching them woodcraft and other things essential to their very existence in New England. A great lesson is to be learned here. Any man who would ever give the other fellow the square deal, financially and otherwise, is the man who succeeds. He inspires confidence, and confidence in business is simply credit.

When the last month of the year puts in its appearance, the political campaign is on by the publishers of various periodicals for which we have subscribed that the time has come for renewal. While we know that the boy who gives us our big bills needs the dentist's art, yet we defer that little matter of renewal until we don't renew at all. Now one of the pleasures of life is reading, and it is a pity that the variety of tastes is simply legion, the supply of reading matter in this country is fully equal to the demand.
